

Mary Ann Makdissi

May 27, 1966 - June 13, 2025

Mary Makdissi was born on May 27, 1966 in Bridgewater, MA to James Buckley and Judith Durkin. She graduated from Bridgewater-Raynham Regional High School. Later in life, she took classes at Metropolitan College. Mary moved from Massachusetts to Arizona to Idaho, before finally settling in Nebraska. She had various jobs throughout her life, but most recently was a Librarian and Special Education Para at DC West.

Throughout her life, Mary enjoyed fashion and liked to spend time on her make-up, and picking out jewelry and outfits. She even was a skilled dressmaker. One of her favorite hobbies was belly dancing; after practicing herself, she went on to teach classes to others. Mary also loved to spend time in nature and to spend time with her friends. Her favorite sports team was the New England Patriots, she enjoyed Italian food, and she loved heavy metal music with her favorite song being, "Bodies."

Mary was known for being bold and outspoken, never afraid to speak her mind. She was also a very creative woman. Mary was kind and compassionate to everyone, and she was always willing to sacrifice her own happiness for those she loved. Mary was preceded in death by her parents, and she is survived by her son, Cedric Murgatroyd.

“ You were my best friend! You left us too soon and I'm sorry you went through so much unnecessary pain. I don't know where you are now but know I'm thinking of you every day.
